

Foundation Arbeit und Umwelt of IG BCE

In 1990, the first unionised environment foundation was established, the foundation Arbeit und Umwelt (labor and environment) of the industrial union IG BCE. Ever since, it has been involved in the "support of human working, environment and living conditions" as it is said in the charter.

Since the establishment it has been our goal to achieve a reasonable balance of economic, social and ecological development. With the help of our own projects, surveys, project support, education and consulting, numerous events as well as the regular awarding of the environment prize we are trying to make as many companies as possible conscious of the sustainable development of our organisation and to integrate it into operational processes, at all hierarchy levels.

Outstanding projects are the awarding of the environment prize (www.arbeit-umwelt.de), environment competitions (www.buero-und-umwelt.de), employée motivation for sustainability (www.mimona.de) and an environment glossary for employées (www.umweltglossar.de).

Also in the future we are going to continue supporting the sustainable development of our industrial and service organisation with the help of our knowledge, commitment and network. Thereby the response to the climate change has to be an innovative climate-, energy- and industry policy, which both protects the climate efficiently and ensures long-term energy supply. Germany has to continue to be a competitive and environment-friendly location for business and industry, which is capable of setting free innovations for ecological and social progress.
